EXECUTIVE MAYOR OF SEKHUKHUNE TESTS NEGATIVE TO COVID-19

Cllr Keamotseng Stanley Ramaila, the Executive Mayor of Sekhukhune District Municipality, has tested negative to COVID-19.

He took a test on Friday, after it was confirmed last week that a staffer located in his office tested positive to the coronavirus.

The Executive Mayor's results were released this morning.

Several municipal officials who had contact with their colleague also tested on Friday, and their results are yet to be released.

They remain in self-isolation.

The Executive Mayor will continue to conduct his meetings virtually, as has been the case recently, and he'll perform most of his other duties from home for the time being.

Once again he conveys his best wishes to our colleague who's tested positive.

"Our thoughts and prayers remain with our official who's recovering in self-isolation," says Ramaila.

"COVID-19 is by no means a thing of the past. Anyone can get it, but it's our responsibility as individuals to stop the spread of coronavirus. Let's observe health precautions at all times," Ramaila adds.
